In paper of the terms will be accommodating. t is believed, that few places promise this im passed by that of no place in the Southern cither States—access to the College, from all parts of the Union, by which parents would wish to hold communication with their sons, is most frequent and easy, and the expenses of living are comparatively small. Annapolis is the Seat of the Government of the State; and the time of the Annual Commencements, which hap-pens during the Session of the Legislature, affinds a night incentive to young men, to distin-guish themselves, by their literary performances.

ADMISSION. Candidates for any standing in the College, will be required to bring from their teachers, testimonials of good moral character; and, in no ase, will a Student be received from any other College, to the same standing in this, unless he shall bring, from the President, or other authority of such College, a certificate of his honor-able dinussion.

EXPENSES. &c. It has not been thought advisable to establish any commons. THE CAVERN OF DEATH:

A VRONTIER LEGEND. Many instances of desperate courage and almost incredible deeds of the Western Pioslmost incredible deeds of the Western Pioneers have sunk unrecorded and unsung with the before and daring actors in the wonderful drama at the west; yet many of these chonicles are still remaining full of thuilling interest, and when related by the grey-haired veteral of the wilderness, to the close-drawn circle of youthful auditors, they inspire such relaining as are alone conceived, when the un-feelings as are alone conceived, when the un-clouded skies of youth are tigged with the promise of the tigolden day." Happy, bless-ed days of sympathy!—of unalloyed sensi-bility! Then could we give a tear to the memory of an unfortunate victim; and when the blinding film would gather in our eyes, unrestrained by falsehearted pride, we poured thought forth tributes from the fountain of life, as in his se benkious to the shades of the unfortunate.—

befire them. It was from one of those venerable men that I received this simple narrative. I shall relate it in his own language. The narrater, though his snow white locks told of the frosty atmosphere which sixty winters had oreathed round him, still possessed most of his faculties unimpaired; and when describing scenes in which he had borne a part, he seemed again to put on the vigour of youth, and as menory's lines were retracted, to forcet that It was from one of those venerable men mory's lines were retracted, to forget that that h his vaunted days had flown. You remember I have often mentioned Jem to rema Bown -- he was my companion in all hunting the hun excursions. He had resided longer on the was no Kentucky borders than myself, and was as active as a punther. He had often cluded the Indians by giving them what he called a some time. fair race for it;" and he was as much superior to the mass of settlers in activity and strength, as he was in the trueness of his strength, as he was in the trueness of his musing aim. I know not what it was that attached Jem to me, for in muscle or vigour I was greatly his inferior; but so it was by that ungreatly his inferior; but so it was by that ungreatly his inferior. greatly his inferior; but so it was by that unaccountable impulse which often causes us to form friendships, without being able to assign a reason for it, we were inseparable.—
Jem was a little fiery and headstrong, and would often have plunged in the midst of a hundred yelling devils, had I not restrained him; at such times Jem's passion knew no bounds; he would strive to shake me off, call me a coward and every opprobrious enithet: me a coward and every opprobrious epithet; but the next moment his reason would inform him better; he would then shake my hand, with "Egad! you're right, Tom—you're jist the water to temper the fire." If we were the water to temper the fire. If we were encircled by an ambushed foe, Jem's first salutation would be, "Tom, give us your hand—we'll show them who they are stopping:" but when I would suggest some stratam for escape, he would yield implicit obeience; and when we were safe from the clutch of the savages, he would swear that "Tom, Jem's parents had a snug cabin, and his younger brothers assisted to till a portion of land, sufficient for the family; but no inducement could get Jem to put his hand to a plough; "Not I.' was his answer, "so long as flint and steel will strike fire: if you're tired of deer, 1'lb give, you a turkey; and who'll want a blanket while there's a plenty of buffalo!"

Jem's sister was called the "Forest Rose," and well did she deserve her romantic name, for the light on her lovely cheeks (to use Jem's own words.) "glowed like the peach trees in full bloom." You need not fancy to yourself, a maiden of the present day, enyeloped in the silks of France or India; the feathers of Arabia; and all the paraphernalia of modern millinery; but a woman adorned by the hand of nature, with all the attributes that render her worthy of her destiny. Health was marked on her cheek, contentment on her brows in him her sunny eye, and happiness in every action: her tresses unconfined, her form undistorted from its natural symmetry and her bland and native courtexy, unshackled by the rules of etiquette: such Jem's sister was called the "Forest Ruse her form undistorted from its fattery, and her bland and native courtesy, unshackled by the rules of etiquette: such was Maria, and I need not tell you, that, had all the charms of person which she possessed, fleen wanting, her amisble disposition would have riveted her chains upon meas powerfully as all combined.
